Governor Lauds Religious Freedom In Tercenary Proclamation

A proclamation designating the six-month period Sept. 19 to March 19 as the Missouri Jewish Tercenary was issued by Gov. Donnelly in the presence of Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman and other Jewish leaders.

Ribba Isserman presented the Governor with a medallion in the name of the National and State Tercenary Committees. The medallion bore the inscription "Man's Opportunities and Responsibilities Under Freedom — 1654-1954."

The Governor's proclamation lauded the results of religious freedom under which religious tradition flourished "and their communicants have lived together in exemplary good will and harmony."

The full proclamation reads:

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, three hundred years ago this month of September, the first Jewish settlement in continental United States was founded in New Amsterdam, and the first Jewish synagogue, Shearith Israel of New York, was formed, and

WHEREAS, the beginning of the Missouri American Jewish Tercenary celebration on September 28, 1954, should remind all Americans of the legacy of religious freedom which is ours. As a result of this freedom, the great religious traditions of the western world have flourished here and their communicants have lived together in exemplary good will and harmony. The right of every man to worship God in accordance with the dictates of his conscience is a glorious part of our national tradition:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, PHIL M. DONNELLY, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI, do hereby proclaim the six-month period starting September 19, 1954, as the

"MISSOURI AMERICAN JEWISH TERCENARY"

and I urge and recommend that wherever American Jewish Tercenary celebrations are held, all Missourians join in marking this significant milestone in the history of the United States and of Missouri. It is my further hope that this observance will serve to strengthen and protect our country's priceless legacy of religious freedom.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the Great Seal of the State of Missouri, in the City of Jefferson, this 17th day of September, 1954.

ROSH HASHANAH STARTS TONIGHT

In synagogues and temples throughout the world, the Jewish religious New Year will be ushered in at sunset, Monday, September 27.

Monday evening's commemoration of Rosh Hashana, which means literally the beginning of the year, inaugurates a ten-day period of spiritual self-analysis and prayer which is climaxed by Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, which begins at nightfall, Wednesday, October 6.

The ritual for the so-called High Holydays is highlighted by the sounds of the Shofar, or ram's horn, the ancient instrument which once called men to warfare and now calls for combat against wrongdoing and shortcomings. Special prayers and melodies voiced in the worship services stress the themes of repentance and divine mercy.

Rosh Hashana is observed two days by traditionalist Jews; one, by Reform Jews.

Orthodox Leader Urges Jewry To Refrain From Travel For Holiday Worship

NEW YORK — Orthodox Jews who do not live within walking distance of a synagogue were urged to refrain from any mode of travel and instead worship at home, in a pre-High Holydays directive issued by Rabbi David B. Hollander of the Bronx, N. Y., president of the Rabbinical Council of America. The Council is comprised of 550 leading orthodox rabbis of the United States and Canada, spokesmen for traditional Jewry.

Asserting that "Orthodoxy is the ancient tradition of our people and worship should be in a synagogue where our traditions are observed and the spirit is fully in keeping with our sacred Torah," Rabbi Hollander stated:

"Although public worship is very important, it nevertheless does not absolve us from any of our commandments. It is forbidden to drive or ride to the synagogue. If the synagogue is too far from your home, then worship at home if you must. Better yet, get together with your neighbors and worship together. Try to arrange for some one to sound the Shofar (Ram's Horn) on the New Year. Under no circumstances may one violate the law concerning travel on the holiday in order to attend public worship, even to listen to the Shofar."

Israel "Only Place On Earth" Where Jews Shape Life—Einstein

PRINCETON, N. J.—Dr. Albert Einstein told a conference of the American Friends of the Hebrew University, that Israel was "the only place on earth" where Jews could shape public life according to their traditional ideals.

"In our tradition it is neither the ruler nor the politician, neither the soldier nor the merchant who represents the ideal. The ideal is represented by the teacher, that is to say, the person who is able through his work and his efforts, to enrich the intellectual, moral and artistic life of his people. This implies a definite repudiation of what is commonly called 'materialism'."

A Yes Vote Means Independence

On Thursday St. Louis will vote on the earnings tax. In addition to representatives of Jewish, Catholic and Protestant religions, many other organizations such as the respected Social Planning Council of St. Louis and St. Louis County have endorsed home rule on the city earnings tax.

The vote will determine whether the city will have control over its financial matters, or whether it will have to continue to depend upon the Missouri State Legislature. If St. Louis approves home rule the earnings tax will be limited to one-half of one per cent—unless another charter amendment will be passed by the city.

One-sixth of the city's income (about $8 million) comes from the earnings tax. Obviously, a defeat of the home rule charter amendment will force city officials to consider other ways to raise necessary funds.

It is a matter of common sense and civic duty to approve the amendment. A city unable to decide its own financial fate is also unable to plan freely the necessary services and constructions it needs. Independence is a cherished quality. St. Louisans will have a chance to grant independence to themselves this Thursday.

Good Will To Men

The spirit of the High Holiday period is saturated with good will for men. Quite unrationally, from a realistic point of view, we wish for a year without its customary burden of sorrow and anguish. Too often we are disappointed—but we hope. And sometimes our hopes are not in vain.

During the past year this country has made a monumental decision in line with the most respected of American traditions and the religious teachings of all major faiths. It has abolished segregation in our educational system. This embarrassing hangover from a past age was hard to explain. We have now corrected it by democratic means.

Although an integrated school system should be an accepted fact, the historical circumstances had formed public sentiment to get used to segregation. In the face of pressures to perpetuate such a system, decency has triumphed.

There is no better lesson for the pessimists. Change can be affected. It is a change from fear to contentment, from uncertainty to security, from war to peace, for which we hope. The New Year period, its demand for introspection and self-understanding, might be instrumental in materializing our hopes. May these hopes be fulfilled in the year to come.

A happy New Year.

America's Battle For Freedom Waged By Minorities—Bryson

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 19. — America's great contribution to man's battle for freedom is that it has been waged by many minorities, each contributing in its personal search for freedom to the freedom for all, Lyman Bryson, professor emeritus of education at Columbia Teacher's College, told a convocation of The Jewish Theological Seminary of America, 3080 Broadway, today.

The convocation which stressed the tercentenary of religious brotherhood in the United States also saw six major Church and Synagogue organizations receive citations for distinguished service to religious brotherhood from Dr. Louis Finkelstein, the Seminary's chancellor.

"The importance of the coming of twenty odd Jewish families to Manhattan from Brazil 300 years ago lies not in their flight from persecution to a land where they were free, but in their arrival at a place where they could fight for freedom," Dr. Bryson said.

Dr. Bryson emphasized that the "great contribution of the Jews to America is their continual and constant fight for freedom and human rights for themselves and others."

"The great contribution of America is that the Jews have not been alone in that fight, but that it was waged also by other minorities, by the Catholics, by the Protestants—themselves divided into minorities."

Internationally Known Authorities To Meet At Washington University

Asks For Help

Editor, Jewish Star:

Every Tuesday morning, accompanied by two friends, I visit the Jewish patients confined in the St. Louis State Hospital, formerly the City Sanitarium, which is located at 5400 Arsenal... After the Rabbi conducts services, we serve the patients refreshments; to the ladies (old and young), we serve the little necessities they request, and which makes their stay in the hospital a little more pleasant; such as a bar of soap, a handkerchief or cosmetics, etc., to the men we give refreshments and cigarettes, occasionally handkerchiefs. All these items I purchase each week out of my own personal funds. Cigarettes are my big problem. Purchasing five cartons of cigarettes each week, besides the other items is very expensive...

I am sure, if your readers could know of my problem, they would be willing to help; if just each of your many readers would send me one pack of cigarettes; or even ten cents toward a pack of cigarettes;

it would help toward solving my cigarette problem...
(Mrs.) Sylvia Boonshaft,

"Insists" To Get Star

Editor, Jewish Star:

"... I have just finished reading your editorial entitled 'Take Me Off Your Mailing List.' It made me very angry to think that some of our people should take such an attitude. Frankly, such a newspaper has been long needed in St. Louis... Since you do not have my name on your mailing list I 'insist' that you put my name down."
Elliott Waxman.

Permanent Place

Editor, Jewish Star:

"... I wish to compliment you and your associates on the splendid manner in which you publish items of interest and information affecting our community. I feel that the Jewish Star has a permanent place in our community..."

Marks Change in Religious Situation, Herberg Return To "Jewishness" and The Synagogue

'Third Generation' Jews Are Imbued with Desire to Recapture Jewish Traditions, Noted Author Declares in Quarterly Published by American Jewish Congress

The past twenty years have witnessed a remarkable change in the religious situation of the Jews in America—a change characterized by the sharp reversal of the trends evident in the 1920s toward the dissolution of Jewishness and the abandonment of the Jewish religious tradition and concern. Will Herberg, noted author and essayist, writes in the current summer issue of JUDAISM, a quarterly journal of Jewish life and thought, published by the American Jewish Congress.

In his article, "Religious Trends in American Jewry," Mr. Herberg, examining the new situation and its significance for Jewish life in America, asserts that assimilation and secularism marked the pattern of American Jewish life from the beginning of the great immigration at the end of the last century, although those tendencies were masked by the continuous influx of new immigrants.

Today, Mr. Herberg declares, this trend toward dissolution and secularism has been reversed and among all sections of American Jewry—but particularly among the younger generation, there is a movement of "return."

This "return" to Jewishness, to self-affirmation as a Jew and to self-identification with Jewry has undoubtedly, Mr. Herberg notes, been spurred by the events of the thirties and forties—the upsurge of anti-Semitism on the one hand and the struggle for the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine. However, he adds, this factor of contemporary history "has fallen in, in the United States at least, with a significant sociological trend—the emergence of the 'third generation' of American Jewry?" He explains:

"The first generation, the immigrant generation, came with their Jewishness as part of their immigrant heritage; it was embedded in their life and culture. The younger members of the generation and of the next revolted against this heritage, and in the process of establishing their independence and adjusting themselves to their new environment, they strove to cast off their Jewishness as part of the immigrant baggage they were so eager to abandon. They were intent—quite naturally and properly intent—upon becoming Americans, and to become Americans they had to cease to be foreigners, which to them only too often meant to cease to be Jews. The third generation is in a very different position; it is secure in its Americanness and does not have an immigrant burden, which it is anxious to throw off."

But here, Mr. Herberg asserts, a question arises "that leads us to the heart of the matter. The 'third generation' phenomenon is common to all of the many immigrant groups that came to these shores in the past century and that have entered into the making of the American people."

"With the Jews," Mr. Herberg declares, "it has been different." The "third generation" Jews are actually returning to Jewishness. How is this to be accounted for? Mr. Herberg argues that the Jews who came to America did of course constitute an immigrant group but that their Jewishness was apparently something that transcended their immigrant character in a way that was not true of the merely ethnic or national character of other immigrant groups.

American Jewry Transformed

The fact of the matter, Mr. Herberg declares, "seems to be that just when the immigrant-cultural basis of American Jewish existence was beginning to disappear with the emergence of a thoroughly American 'third generation,' American Jewry was becoming transformed into what sociologists call a 'religious community.'"

Today, Mr. Herberg contends, it is a member of a religious group that the great mass of Americans understand the status of the Jew in this country and that the American Jew understands himself.

By and large, Mr. Herberg observes, "the religion of the average American Jew is of a kind of 'liberal Judaism' not very far removed from the 'liberal Protestantism' of the church around the corner." This is about equally true, he asserts, of the American Orthodox and Conservative groups as of the Reform group, despite important secondary differences between them. "Nothing," he comments, "is perhaps more American than this kind of religion, sincere but without content."

Growing Concern For Religion

However, Mr. Herberg notes within this movement of renewed affiliation with the synagogue, there is under way another movement—a new and growing concern for religion as personal faith and commitment. This new concern, he declares, is to be found in very degree among all sections of American Jewry, but chiefly among the younger people particularly in college. This new outlook is characterized by a turn to inwardness, by a distrust of pat words, by a readiness to listen, an openness to the new, along with a genuine desire to recapture Jewishness, the authentic tradition of Jewish faith."

The National Convention of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, which will be held in Atlantic City, N. J., on November 11-14, 1954, will mark the beginning of an extensive program of coordinated action on all levels of the communal scene.

"This four-day convention culminates a year of intensive planning, and will give all attending delegates a concrete and positive program of religious action to bring back to their communities," was the statement issued by the Union's National Convention chairman, Reuben E. Gross, of Staten Island, New York.

The Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America serves as the parent body of traditional synagogues throughout the United States. As a constituent member of such bodies as the National Community Relations Advisory Council, Synagogues Council of America, the Union acts as the national spokesman for traditional Judaism.

1654 - 1954 FIRST JEWS TO LAND IN THE U.S.

Nieuw Amsterdam was thirty years old when Abraham DeLucena, Jacob Henriques, Asser Levy, Joseph D'Acosta, with their friends and kin, came to settle there in the year 1654. The first Jewish group to arrive in what is now the United States increased by twenty-three the number of inhabitants of the tiny Dutch colony.

In 1954, when American Jews and their neighbors mark the 300th anniversary of Jewish settlement in the United States, they will not only be commemorating this single historical event, they will be honoring all pioneers of American freedom. And they will recognize as pioneers all who helped to build this nation, whether they pushed beyond the frontier to establish homes in the wilderness or laid the foundation for a new existence in the crowded tenements of our industrial cities.

At the approach of the New Year let us continue to plan and work to make this a land of equal opportunity.

A NEW YEAR MESSAGE

By Rabbi M. H. Eichenstein

Rabbi Of The United Orthodox Jewish Community Of St Louis

On the threshold of Rosh Hashono, we look back to the happy and epoch making events of the last six years—the establishment of the State of Israel and the rebirth of the Jewish Nation, we not only are adding another year to our calendar, but in the year to come we must prepare ourselves to embrace a new era—the era of repentance.

Israel's Prophets issued a call for spiritual reconversion of the world a long time ago. Our primary duty is to mend our ways. The living up to the highest ethical values of our Tora should be strengthened by unflinching loyalty to our sacred tradition as a whole.

Merely belonging to a congregation and paying dues cannot go too far toward the creation of the Jewish Community as a constructive and moral force in our midst. True religion must be practiced, at home, at work and, of course, in the synagogue if we are not to deceive ourselves.

Many indeed are the youth organizations attached to the synagogues and temples, but equally important are some of the motives which are responsible for their coming into being. In many instances, the motives are clearly the dance and social life. I do not mean to depreciate the value of the social aspects of the Junior Congregations. But what I do mean to stress is, in most cases, its program is not of sufficient Jewish intensity so as to make its members conscious of hard pressing Jewish problems.

The youth who is attached to the temple is taught that knowing Jewish history and literature is to be their supreme achievement. They are permeated with the idea that knowledge, by itself, is a sufficient goal to strive for and, having attained this goal, they have fulfilled their duty as Jews.

But let us not forget the ancient rabbinic saying, that knowledge in itself, worthy as it may be, is not the final achievement but is only significant insofar as its contribution and influence to do worthy deeds.

Fair dealings with our fellowmen, Kosher homes, the religious education of our youth, the observance of the Sabbath and the holidays, should become the concrete expression of our Jewish aspirations. We can best serve the world in augmenting its moral forces, by leading exemplary religious lives.

Jewish life in the United States must be strengthened culturally and religiously, if it is to withstand the many onslaughts being made against its structure.

At this time, I wish to extend to the entire Jewish Community my heartfelt wishes for a very happy and prosperous New Year of 5715.

Asks Community to Pay Tribute to Jewish Pioneers — Sosna

"The year 5715 marks the 300th anniversary of Jewish settlement in the United States. We pay tribute to the Jewish pioneers and patriots who have helped to make our country the world center of freedom and progress," stated A. M. Sosna, president, in his New Year message on behalf of the St. Louis Zionist Organization.

"May we prove worthy," read the statement, "of the rich heritage they have left us, combining the ancient Jewish concepts of justice and human brotherhood with the American ideals of democracy. In Israel, the defenders and builders of the young Jewish State face the trails of national rebirth with resolution and courage. In their heroic struggle they need the utmost assistance of American Jewry. They need, equally, the continuing understanding and support of the American people as a whole. In the New Year it is our sacred trust to strive for both these essential ends, looking to an era of peace and security for Israel and all mankind."

FROM CIVIL WAR TO COLD WAR

The Saga Of Jewish Military Morale Services In The U. S.

By GEORGE PERRY

When a hard-headed businessman and deeply-principled Jew by the name of Asser Levy, one of the band of 23 Jews who settled in New Amsterdam in 1654, won for his fellow Jews the right to serve in the colony's defense establishment—and later wrung from the Dutch authorities the complete burgher right—he wrote the first chapter in the 300-year story of American Jewry's participation in all the wars of the United States, both as soldiers and builders of military morale. More than two centuries later, in the spirit of Asser Levy, American Jews again struck a blow for first class citizenship by establishing during the Civil War the right of rabbis to serve as military chaplains.

Jews, then, have served in the fighting forces of America since Colonial days; Jewish chaplains have ministered to the religious needs of soldiers since the Civil War.

American Jewry's principal morale effort in the Civil War had a non-sectarian character for it was as they were, these scattered efforts revealed the inchoate outlines of the world-wide Jewish morale and religious program that American Jewry developed in both World Wars.

The damnyankee Jew occasionally found a Jewish welcome down south, as this incident told by Dr. Korn indicates: It was close to Rosh Hashanah when Henry Frank and Isaac Lowenberg, two soldiers with the invading Union army, dropped in at John Mayer's store in Vicksburg, Miss., to inquire about services. They had come to the right place for Mayer was president of Vicksburg's Congregation Anshe Chesed. Lacking its own synagogue and unable to hold regular services, the handful of Vicksburg Jews did observe the High Holy Days in a makeshift sanctuary on the second floor of a fire house. There the two soldiers in blue worshipped with their coreligionists of the Confederacy.

In the Spanish-American War the Jewish community was still loathe to participate as Jews in organized morale work or to sponsor such a national conference of Jewish religious groups, and out of this historic gathering was born the Jewish Board for Welfare Work in the Army and Navy, later to be celebrated as the Jewish Welfare Board. In September, 1917, JWB was officially recognized by the United States Government as the Jewish agency for morale and religious work in the armed forces, a status it retains on behalf of American Jewry.

Between the Spanish American War and World War I world events caught up with the non-sectarian character of services provided by American Jewry for soldiers. Large numbers of the hundreds of thousands of Jewish immigrants who had poured into the United States in the late 1890s and the first decade of the twentieth century found themselves, and in many instances their sons, too, drafted for military service during World War I. The overwhelming need for a full program of Jewishly-oriented morale and welfare activities, and of course for Jewish religious services and literature, brought about an all-out Jewish morale effort in which JWB mobilized institutional and communal resources on an unprecedented scale.

When World War II broke out, JWB was a going concern, with more than two decades of experience in community organization and in providing for the religious and welfare needs of Jewish military personnel wherever American forces were stationed. As the government authorized agency for this work, JWB had the acceptance of the Jewish community.

The prodigious unified Jewish morale effort, launched and carried out despite a far from united community, has been termed Operation Jewish Unity.

Operation Jewish Unity, fortified by tons of religious literature, morale supplies and kosher food, made possible Jewish religious and morale activities around the world—religious services in the Arctic and in the Pacific jungles, seders in Europe, Africa, China and Australia.

With the war's end, JWB reduced but did not dismantle its morale service structure. Wisely, it maintained standby machinery which quickly moved into high gear again when the cold war began in the late 1940s and burst into flame with the war in Korea in 1950. Once again the Jewish community mobilized under JWB leadership. The most striking manifestation of this effort was the precedent-shattering chaplaincy recruitment program in which the rabbinical seminaries and the Central Conference of American Rabbis, Rabbinical Assembly of America and Rabbinical Council of America joined forces with JWB's Commission on Jewish Chaplaincy. This procurement program, which made chaplaincy service a kind of internship for all physically qualified rabbinical graduates, has already brought over 100 rabbis into the chaplaincy service.

THE CENTER AT THE FRONT

Army YMHA on Texas border during Mexican trouble of 1916 marked beginning of Jewish community-sponsored religious and welfare services for Jewish military personnel by predecessor of JWB.

confined largely to participation in the program of the Sanitary Commission, a kind of precursor of the USO of World War II. Dr. Bertram Korn, whose fascinating book, "American Jewry in the Civil War," is the authoritative source for most of our information on this era, told of Jewish women's societies that raised thousands of dollars for the Commission and shipped tons of food, medical and sanitary supplies and clothing to the soldiers on all fighting fronts.

Purim balls and other Jewish holiday parties raised large sums for the Sanitary Commission. Rabbis used the pulpit to appeal for funds for soldier relief. One of the high points of this non-sectarian effort was the voluntary conversion of several wards of the Jews' Hospital in New York (now Mount Sinai) to war service.

Strange to say, the Jewish community undertook little or nothing on behalf of Jewish soldiers as such. Whether it was fear of anti-Semites or sensitiveness to charges of segregation, the Jewish community's efforts on behalf of the specifically Jewish needs of Jewish troops were insignificant. Feeble, work for Jewish soldiers. It was generous in supporting the war program but it overlooked the strictly Jewish needs of the 4000 men who served in the war with Spain. There were even anguished cries of "chutzpah" in some Jewish papers when a southern rabbi applied for a commission as a Jewish chaplain. For the first time in American history, thanks to the efforts of the newly-organized Jewish Congregational Union, the Army granted furloughs to Jewish soldiers during the High Holy Days of 5659 (1898), thus recognizing the right rather than the privilege of Jewish servicemen to request such leave.

Jews in the National Guard units that went to the Mexican border during the fighting there in 1916 had their religious and morale needs met by Army YMHAs created in Texas by the new National Council of Young Men's Hebrew and Kindred Associations, JWB's progenitor, formed in 1913 as a national organization of YMHAs and Jewish Community Centers. When war with Germany began in 1917, it was this Council that first saw the need of a special agency for Jewish morale work.

This national association of Centers took the initiative in convening
